The Hog Market.

As the time is at hand when our farmers are interested in the hog market, we clip the following from the New Albany (Ind.) Ledger, which shows something of the

It is the opinion of those most competent to judge that pork will rule at low fig-tres this fall. The corn crop was very large, and stock hogs generally abundant. These fact, taken in connection with the probability that there will not be a very large foreign demand, and also the well known fact that hogs for the past two years ruled extremely high, leaving very little margin for packers, will conduce greatly to bring about a combined effort to keep down the price of fatted hogs, and consequently the very material reduction in the price of pack and respectively. in the price of pork and packed meats. We heard this morning of a transaction which took place in Louisville vesterday—the purchase of seven hundred barrels of pork for January delivery, at 50 per barrel. This is certainly a very heavy reduction as compared with the prices which ruled at the same time last season.

Contracts for pork were made in Plice county, ten days ago, for delivery Novem-ber 15th, at $7.00; but buyers would hardly offer more than $6.25 gross, last week Corn is selling at 80c., and wheat at 75cc

See, for choice.

The market for hogs is quite depressed, and farmers are making up their minds to accept the lower scale of prices offered by packers. The yield will be large, and the hogs will generally be well fatted, as there is plenty of corn to reed. So writes a Gibson county farmer.

The Herse from a Moral Standpoint.

The driver who fights his horses has not got through the first lesson in the manage-ment of these animals. Some strike their horse in a fit of anger; others beat them as a punishment for what they conceive to be

Now, the fact is, the horse never does wrong on purpose. In this respect he is better than most men. It he refuses to pull it is the fault of education, and if he runs away and kicks things to pieces, it is because he is frightered. Men when they are scared do some very foolish things, and they are excused, but no allowance is made for the runaway horse. He is kicked, euffed and beat, as if what was done was on purpose to hurt somebody, and not in consequence of supposed danger, which the poor animal was trying to flee from.

Horses never kick without a motive, spey use their heels for defense, and the first kick at the traces is given to ward off what to them seems danger. No horse over kicked for any other purpose. They cherish no ill-feeling against any one, and always do as far as they know, what is always do, as far as they know, what is

All horses can be educated to do whatever the driver wishes. They obey cheerfully and without grumbling, even though put to rest with half rations in a cold, filthy, muddy stable. A horse can easily be taught to know the harness will not hurt him. Then he will not blek at it and run away He is also easily taught to pull by the traces or by the halter-strap. If you want him to pull well on the halter, all you have to do is to hitch him with something he can easily break, and he will soon learn to pull back with such force that no bridle will bold him. If you want him to die will hold him. If you want him to pull welf by the traces, give him a light load until he learns to move it, and he will soon pull his best at heavy loads.

Horses balk or pull just as they are taught. It does not matter which end of a horse you fasten the weight to. They will balk as readily when hitched by the traces, if improperly trained, as when hitched by the halter; and they will pull back as faithfully by the halter, if trained to do so, as they pull forward, when hitched by the traces to a warron.

to a wagon. It is an easy matter to teach a horse to refuse to pull at either the halter or traces, and it is equally as easy to teach bim to pull by the same means. If those who drive horses would keep this fact in view, of beating their team in a mud-hole or on the hillside.

Railroad Accident.

Among the sufferers in the late terrible railroad accident, twelve miles from Co-lumbia, a few days ago, an account of which was published in our telegraph reports, was Colonel Hagood, who commanded a regiment of South Carolina troops in the Confederate army. In describing the accident, an exchange says that Col. H. was sented near the forward end of the car, and it is supposed that in its descent he was so violently thrown against the front as to fracture his skull

Col. Hagood was as brave a soldier as ever drew a sword, but facked judgment on the battle-field. In one of the cam-paigns in Virginia, with a single regiment, he attacked a Federal line of battle, and it was not until he had been bloodily repulsed three times and lost half his men, kill-of the three.

A negro in ed and captured, that he retired. The survivors were deeply incensed against him for the useless slaughter, especially as the point attacked, even if it had been carned, was of no importance, and they knew ite was fighting for promotion, which Bold Robbery at Chattanooga.

Chattanooga is evineing other signs of progress besides increase of population and prosperity. The Times of yesterday contains an account of one of the boldest robberies we have lately heard of :

"The heroes of this achievement are George D. Critchett and Scotty McIntosh, George Critchett is a man of about 25 years of age, medium height, and was considered to be a sporting character, but no such acts as the one for which he now waits trial were ever attributed to him.

"Critchett's alleged companion in crime, Scotty Meintosh, has heretofore been known as a quiet, inoffensive and apparently harmless man, of about 23 years of age, of medium height, sandy complected, and light built. He has been employed as bar-keeper for different saloots, and always enjoyed a good character for honesty and industry.

"The particulars of the robbery, as given by the assaulted parties, are that the two men had been in company with Critchett and McIntosh during the early part of the evening, and one of them accidentally showed a few hundred dollars in money which, however, he deposited in the Ex-

The parties since that they are from Alabama, but refused to give their names.

"The robbery was committed about two o'clock Thesday morning, near the corner of Market and Seventh streets. The high-waymen approached from behind the stranger, and each made a dash for his man. Critica it succeeded in getting about $30 out of his near's pockets, but "Scotty" was not so successful, and would have probably been whinted out in a short time if was not so succe-sful, and would have pro-bably been whipped out in a short time, if left to his adversary, but the cry of "po-lice!" was raised, and before the robbers could get away with their booty, they were placed under range of a couple of revolvers in the hands of John Hankins and Ed Hagan, of the special police force, who took them to jall to await the action of the grand jury. grand jury.

An indictment was returned and a true bill found, which will have a hearing at this term of court, if possible."

The first named robber, Critchett, was a candidate for Chief Marshal of Chattanooga, and was considered the "big dog in the fight," the Times says.

His driver dismounted and took hold of the bits, but the proud head went up with a still more defiant jerk, and an air which said, "I shall fight it out on this line."

The driver, in despair, again takes his seat, and is vainly orging the obstinate animal, when a lady steps gracefully forward from a neighboring house. Her face is a picture of kindness and good will to all mankind, and especially to horsekind at this particular moment. In her hand are two apples. She holds one to the mouth of this obstinate animal. What horse with a particle of chivalry in his nature could resist such a mode of warfare? Certainly not this one.

His lips take in the delicious morsel and his obstinacy vanishes in a moment, starts readily, but the lady evidently be-lieves in finishing the work thoroughly, and holds out one more to him. He takes it as gracefully as it is given, and then with a right good will and at a good pace, starts in the proper direction. Two apples did that work. Drivers of obstinate horses, take notice! Keep a little supply of this kind of urging in your pockets, and you will save time, patience and temper.

RUSSIA has improved the time when the eyes of all Europe are on Bismarck and his armies in France, to do a neat little stroke of business in Central Asia. Far beyond the Ural Mountains lies the province of Samarcand, a dependant of Bokhara until two years ago, when the troops of the Czar penetrated thither, made war on the Emir, and forced him to cede to Russia Samarcand and the whole middle course of the river Ser Afshan. They, moreover, turn-ed this same Emir of Bokhara into a mere Russian Governor, and made his rich pro-vince part of the empire of the Czar. This summer the conquest of the Russians has been extended to the independent province of Sherizebs, south of Samarcand. The country has been invaded, its capital taken by assault, and the entire state made sub-servient to the Bokhara Emir, who is, as already stated, merely a vassal of Russia. Thus, step by step, the Muscovite Colossus is reaching farther and farther into the rich districts of Central Asia, extending farther and farther the conquests which al-ready lengthened the Russian Empire from the White Sea to the Euxine, from the Baltie Sea to the Pacific.—Cleveland Lead-
